1. So-called People's Revolutionary Committees (人民革命委員會) have been formed in all towns and villages in Huiyang, Paoan, Tungkuan, and near-by hsien. The head office is in each hsien city, and executive offices have been established in other towns.
2. The executive offices have 9 committee members, with the chairman appointed by the head office. The local political commissar serves as secretary.
3. Each town committee has established six sections, as follows: propaganda, joint security, children, youth, first aid, and supply. Most important is the joint security section, which carries out investigations and counter-espionage activities. The first aid and supply sections are made up of men and women between 45 and 60 years of age.
